The Manager,
Dear Sir,

I have been pondering writing to you for the past 14 days since purchasing a pizza to (take away). Now I am resolved and I have to write to you.
My doctor has urged me to write to you as he has simply 'given up' on me saying I'm An impossible case.'
Since eating the last pizza you baked for me, I have had nothing but problems.
I am unable to sleep properly, my imagination plays tricks on me and my taste buds have been spoiled.

I am writing to ask you to please leave town!!!

In fact my life has been an absolute misery for the past 2 weeks.
Other side effects are: I am unable to go to any other pizza making premises,
I have had a loss of enjoyment of anything else Italian (including other Italian dishes) and my work focus has diminished along with my work productivity and my income.
In short I have not stopped thinking about your pizzas since eating the last one.

Please tell me, when you are going to leave town?

I need to know this so that I can put your pizzas out of my mind. Your pizzas are the best thing that has happened to me since ...since I can remember eating pizzas! But please tell me one thing, how is it possible to make them so, so tasty and so addictive?

Please do not tell anybody of the contents of this letter as I most certainly do not want my affliction passed on or become known...

Yours sincerely

Jonathan White
